BEAUTIFULLY CURATED

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff
they comfort me.” — Psalm 23:4

With heavy hearts and deep gratitude for a life intentionally and beautifully lived, we celebrate the life of Lee Arthur Decuir, who departed this life on April 14, 2026, at the age of 90, in Houston, Texas.

Lee was born on January 29, 1936, in Shreveport, Louisiana, to Buker Decuir and Elizabeth Crockom. From an early age, he possessed a quiet strength, a curious mind, and a presence that would eventually impact lives across continents.

After attending Venture High School, Lee earned a full basketball scholarship to Pepperdine University, where he was admired not only as an athlete, but also as a leader within the university community. Following graduation, Lee began pursuing a master's degree before destiny redirected his path. After interviewing with TWA Airlines, he was selected as the first Black American Managing Director for the airline's African operations headquarters in Kampala, Uganda, a historic achievement that would forever shape the course of his life.

Africa was not simply a destination for Lee; it became a calling.

Through his travels across continents, from bustling cities to remote corners of the world, Lee developed a profound appreciation for culture, language, history, and humanity. His career with TWA refined his leadership, sharpened his communication skills, and expanded his global perspective. More importantly, it nurtured a lifelong passion for connection, exploration, and purpose.

In 1973, Lee was selected to serve as part of an official United States six-month African tour delegation alongside distinguished leaders, including Mr. Jim Woods. During this extraordinary journey, he had the rare honor of meeting Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, a moment he cherished for the remainder of his life.

Traveling throughout Africa, Lee immersed himself in the richness of its people, traditions, art, and music.

He collected more than artifacts; he collected stories, experiences, and relationships that became woven into the fabric of his identity.

At the conclusion of the six-month tour, during a New Year's Eve celebration at Kampala's renowned Apollo Hotel, Lee proposed to Philippa, who was then completing her studies at Makerere University.

A year later, they were married in Kampala, Uganda, beginning a beautiful union rooted in love, adventure, and shared purpose.

Soon afterward, they relocated to New York before later returning to Nairobi, Kenya, where Lee established businesses and continued building a life deeply connected to Africa.

It was in Nairobi that Lee and Philippa welcomed their children, Kwame and Lisa, both born at Nairobi Hospital and forever connected to the African story that shaped their family.

In 1984, as their children reached school age, the family returned to the United States. Yet Africa never left Lee's heart. He continued traveling back frequently, maintaining lifelong friendships and deep cultural ties. Even in his later years, Lee planned a return journey to Africa in May 2026, with Rwanda especially close to his heart.

Beyond his travels and accomplishments, Lee created something even more extraordinary, a living museum of four worlds: music, books, art, and family.

His home was not merely a place to live; it was an experience. Every room reflected intention, beauty, culture, history, and love. Through music, literature, artwork, and storytelling, Lee created spaces that inspired thought, conversation, and connection. Lee also loved basketball and was a proud member of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc..

Family remained the center of his world.

Lee leaves to cherish his memory: his beloved wife, Philippa Carolyn Kibugu Decuir; his children, Kwame Decuir, Lisa Decuir-Hardie, and Samir Decuir; his cherished grandchildren, Jaylon and Lia; his brother, James Crockom; his sister, Mercie Booker; along with a host of nieces, nephews, extended family members, and dear friends.

He was preceded in death by his daughter, Lia Decuir; grandson, Tajuan; his father, Buker Decuir; and his mother, Elizabeth Crockom. To know Lee was to experience warmth, wisdom, culture, and quiet strength. His life reminds us that we are not simply here to exist, but to build, to love, to explore, and to leave beauty behind. Lee's legacy lives on through his family, his stories, his collections, and every life he touched.

He did not simply live a life, he created a world.

GLOBAL LEADERSHIP

A remarkable life. An enduring legacy.

Lee's career was defined by vision, determination, and a deep commitment to connecting people and places across the world. From the basketball court to the boardroom, he demonstrated extraordinary leadership and earned respect on a truly global stage.

Through his travels across continents, from bustling cities to remote corners of the world, Lee developed a profound appreciation for cultures, languages, history, and humanity. His career with TWA afforded him leadership, sharpened his communication skills, and expanded his global perspective. More importantly, it nurtured a lifelong passion for connecting communities and people.

Traveling throughout Africa, Lee immersed himself in the traditions of its people, traditions, art, and music. He collected more than artifacts; he collected stories, experiences, and relationships that became woven into the fabric of his identity.

He believed in people. He invested in potential.

He built bridges. He opened doors.

He led with honor, served with humility,
and loved without limits.

His journey took him across continents,
but his impact will be felt for generations.
He leaves behind a legacy of leadership, service, faith, and family.

We celebrate a remarkable man whose life continues to inspire,
guide, and uplift us all.
